PECOS VALLEY TO GRAMMA GRADES

Arrangements Made to Ship Fruit in Solid Trainloads This Season.

PECOS, TEX., March 7.—A solid carload of grapes, vines, has arrived at Pecos from Fresno, Calif., and will be planted on different farms in this vicinity. It is estimated that this year will see the largest increase in grape vineyards ever recorded in Pecos valley of Texas.

Two new wells were brought in near Pecos this week, both in the proved artesian belt. One well, that of S. Curtis, formerly of Tennessee, flows exceeding 500 gallons a minute.

The Santa Fe railway Eastern New Mexico and Pecos Valley lines are making arrangements to handle solid trainloads of Pecos valley cantaloupes and other fruit from Pecos, Carlsbad, Artesia, Lakewood and Roswell to Eastern markets. About 1500 acres are now being put into cantaloupes at Pecos, Artesia, Lakewood and Roswell. In addition to the cantaloupe shipments, regular shipments of peaches, pears and apples will be handled.

It is estimated that not less than 1000 carloads of Pecos valley cantaloupes will move from various Pecos valley points during the coming season, putting the Pecos valley third in cantaloupe shipments and ahead of the Rio Grande valley and the Salt River valley, both of which sections last year exceeded the Pecos valley in shipments.

Contracts have been signed up between the officers and individual members of the Pecos Cantaloupe Growers' association, guaranteeing approximately 300 acres in cantaloupes for this season. At the meeting held in Pecos, an executive committee was organized, consisting of J. W. Moore and P. A. Whaley of Pecos, D. W. McKee of McKees, M. G. Smith of Carlsbad, S. Curtis of Pecos, J. W. Anderson of Balmorhea, R. H. Hindley and J. W. Weid of the section of shallow water land between Pecos and Lordsburg, and purchased for the entire association from one firm.

ORCHARDISTS PLAN SPRAYING CAMPAIGN

Indications Favor Big Crop of Fruit in the Upper Pecos.

Roswell, N. M., March 7.—The question of spraying is receiving much attention from the orchardists just now. They have been making considerable investigation in other fruit sections to learn the results other orchardists have had in fighting the codling moth, practically all of them with which they have to contend here.

The fruit buds are in excellent shape, orchardists say, and the indications are that there will be another big crop this year.

"Although we had a wonderful crop last year and one that averaged few failures," said a prominent orchardist, "I am convinced that the men who cut down our average last year are going to do better work this year. They have come to realize the importance of spraying and especially first spraying. While we must admit that in the past it has been necessary to force some people to spray, I believe that this number will be materially reduced and this year the man who owns the orchard will do the work at the right time, willingly and gladly."

PLAINVIEW FARMERS TO PLANT ALFALFA

Irrigation Is Solving the Problem in the Plains Country.

Plainview, Texas, March 7.—It is reported that the Kagan-Guthrie company has purchased 200 acres in the center of the county and plans to sow the entire tract in alfalfa and irrigate from a big well which will be put in shortly. S. B. Farris, who lives north of Plainview, last year farmed 40 acres of alfalfa and 60 light acres in corn. He reports that he made feed stuff enough to do him for more than a year, and sold enough to net him $200.

Mayor James R. Delay of Plainview is a strong believer in alfalfa irrigation on his 140-acre farm west of this section. In his farm west of this section, he has 150 acres in this crop and announces that he will plant 350 more to it this spring.

While making the alfalfa crop report, Plainview recently, J. C. Hensel, a modestly disclosed figure that are near the record for the state. Without irrigation on his 140-acre farm, he averaged 54 bushels to the acre off an eight-acre tract, and he sold the grain at 75 cents per bushel, or $40.50 per acre. He also raised alfalfa, which he sold at 15 cents per bushel, and a dwarf variety of alfalfa which is two weeks earlier than the ordinary variety.

A Knight, president of the Third National bank of Plainview, and the largest alfalfa grower and hog raiser in the county, has been making a study from an alfalfa products factory in South Dakota, relative to the establishing of a like concern at Plainview. Alfalfa, corn, cotton and bread made from alfalfa came by concurrent mail.
